Riggin Mail Order Romance Ends in Bitter Chapter at Graveside.

LAUREL, Del., Feb. 21.-William A. Riggin will not say to-day what he intends to do with his wife's bequest. He expected to inherit $50,000 from her. In mourning and tears he stood beside her grave in Sharptown cemetery yesterday and he heard her will read. It

There need be no worry as to ample supplies for the housewife this week-end in wholesale markets; her chiefest trouble is more likely to be lack of cash to buy all she finds and wants-such bargains!

yesterday at the Metropolitan Opera House the matines cycle of Wag-ner's "Der Ring Des Nibelungen." Rarely, if ever, has there been a performance that held so much of inspiration. A living memory it must remain to those who were privileged to hear it. The audience was stirred to an uncommon degree. After calling out the principal singers and the conductor too many times to remember, it dispersed with little hand-shakings and congratulations that were subdued for very intensity of feeling. And on everybody's lips was the name, above that of all others, of Carl Braun, the new impersonator of Hagen.

until yesterday had this malign and sin-ister son of Alberich been disclosed so graphically. In voice, in look, in ges ture, in intonation, Mr. Braun presented figure of such fateful eignificance as to filumine the whole tragedy and to project its import as never before has and an opulence of tone fairly astounding. BOSTON ORCHESTRA PLAYS NEW SYMPHONY BY LENDVAL

Dr. Karl Muck, at the fourth concert the season by the Boston Symphony presented a programme that may well be called brilliant, for, principally, it served to show the virtuosity of his distingulahed band. A symphony in D major by Erwin Lendval, heard for the first time in New York, furnished a re-Distinction 'Through freshing novelty. The composer is barey turned thirty and the symphony is only his opus le. The work is chiefly remarkable for its wealth of color. In ichness of orchestration Mr. Lendval He presents a series of pictures sku-fully blended into a harmonious whole. And he is not an imitator. The four movements are marked Andante religioso, Con moto, Mesto ed assat tranquillo and Vivace. At a first hearing the two middle ones seem to fascinate the most. The first is impressive and the last has infectious charm.

For the rest there were Weber's "Der Freischultz" overture, Strause's 'Till Bulenspiegel's Merry Pranks" and Berhor's "Renvenuto Cellini" overture, each performed admirably and appreciated by the distinguished music lovers that subscribe to these concerts.

Maggie Teyte, the dainty little English soprano of the Philadelphia-Chicago Opera Company, gave a farewell recital at Acollan Hall yesterday after audience. Recovered from the cold appearance with Edmond Clement, the French tenor, she sang with delightful freshness. She began her programme with an Italian group that included songs by Mozart. Parelli, Giordani and Kurt Schindler. A French group of Debussy's songs came next, and then a try in a few days. It will be his sixth freshness. She began her programme German group of compositions by Schumann and Grieg. ## PAYS KEENE ESTATE $30,000 FOR BALLOT

The One-Time Great Racehorse is Now Located in English Stud.

There is at least one breeder and turfman who has no fear for the future of the American turf. He is John E. Madden of Kentucky. He showed his faith yesterday by purchasing from the estate of the late James R. Keens the one time great race horse Ballot. Philip J. Chinn acted as the selling agent. The price was $20,000. Ballot has been insured for $30,000 since the sale. H. K. Knapp, a State Racing Commis-sioner, and F.R. and T. Hitchcook, stewards of the Jockey Club, were associated with Madden in the purchase of Ballot. Ballot is now located at Lord Marcus Beresford's Heath House stud in England. He was shipped abroad in October, 1911. During his sojourn in England he was mated to a large number of marcs, despite the fact that his service fee was placed at $500. At the same rate, Ballot would bring his new owner at least $5,000 a year. As he is only nine years of age, and in the natural course of events may trip across the ocean—a record for ocean voyages by a thoroughbred staillon. Any stallion that can make that number of trips and thrive under it must be a horse of great constitution, as a trip to Europe is usually very severe on horses. When he ar-rives here he will be sent to Ham-burg Piace, the breeding farm owned by Madden.
